"Twill happen to be christened." Let the Clerks Contribute. To the Editor of The Evening Star: It is intimated that even the last house t

house canvass for the G. A. R. encampment fund has failed to produce the requisite results. I want to suggest a way that cannot fail of success and that can very easily be worked. Let each government employe, whether he gets $8,000 a year or a dollar a day, contribute $1 toward the fund. Surely no one will refuse to give that much, and the deficit in the fund will be made up at once. Many of the clerks are old soldiers and have already contributed to their post fund or in other directions for the same object, but none of these woul refuse a dollar. Many have been in the government service since be-fore the war, and certainly ought to be willing to contribute $1 toward the entertainment of those who periled their lives that they might draw their salaries in security in this city.

It must be remembered that the men who are coming here in September are the men that saved the life of the republic. They left their business, their homes and their families at the call of their country and marched to the front to pre-serve the Union. They did preserve it and the country owes them a debt of gratitude that it can never pay. We in Washington saw more of the stern realities and even the horrors of war than did the people of any city where a Grand Army encampment has heretofore been held and we should have a greater appreciation of the services of these veterans whom we will entertain.

I believe that if the suggestion I have made

EXCURSIONS.

The variable weather yesterday afternoon interfered considerably with the excursion business, yet a large number ran the risk of the showers and took refuge from the heat upon the Potomac. At night at River View there was a brilliant display of fireworks, first those of the kind that will burn on the water, which was a decidedly novel sight, and later there were many set peices, bombs, rockets and other specimens of the pyrotechnic art upon the grounds. Both displays were excellent and each number was loudly applauded. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated by Chinese lanterns and on the shoulder, called his attention to two pyrotechnics were under the the charge of Mr.

A CHILEAN CLAIM.

Minister Egan Would Have No Authority to Present It Unless Instructed. A special cable dispatch to the New York Herald from Valparaiso, Chile, says:

"An incident has just come to light showing United States Minister Egan's sympathy with the Balmacedists. During the early part of 1891 Antonio Mathieu, an American citizen, was arrested on a trumped-up charge. The real cause of his arrest was his sympathy for the congressionalists. He was so badly treated by the police that he died.

"His widow repeatedly asked Mr. Egan to bring the matter before the Chilian government with a view to obtaining relief. The various pretexts. Mathieu had no right, he said, to take sides against the government in Sam Lee's place on Pennsylvania avenue, which was recognized by the United States, and he did not wish to be bothered about it "Sam Lee," he said to the clerk, "don't "The fact is that the brutal tre

The "Senators" Will Try Them. Pitcher Richard A. Fitzgerald, the clever captain of the Young Men's Catholic Club, and Albert Myers, the short-stop of the same club, will be given a chance by the Washingtons when they play the Y. M. C. A. on August 12. Fitzgerald has made a great reputation as an ama-teur pitcher and when he has been in the box teur pitcher and when he has been in the box for his club the question has not been how many hits the opposing batters would get, but how many would strike out, it being very fre-quent for him to retire a nine without a hit. He has the reputation of twenty-four strike outs and no hits, nineteen strike outs and no hits, nineteen strike outs and one hit and other big records. He has had four offers from minor records. He has had four offers from minor league clubs.

Myers is certainly a great short stop, and the way he handles the ball would make some of the professionals blush. Nothing is too hot for him. His threwing is very accurate and he bats terrifically. He has knocked the ball over the right-field fence of the Y. M. C. A. grounds and into the coal yards back of Capitol Park. They are both steady players and can always be until tomorrow.

The fight occurred in that part of the bureau located in the 9th sreet building and caused so much excitement that several ladies fainted and the work of the office was badly interrupted.

According to facts as stated to the district attorney Mr. Stier, who was a clerk under the alleged sassilant, comissimed that the latter asserted too much authority about the office and Saturday he went to the chief's deak and told him in plain English that he was tired of it. Following this the men quarreled and the chief, it is charged, made the first assault. They tossed about the floor and one of the clerks says that Stier came near being thrown out the fifth-story window His face was badly cut and bruised, as though a ring on his chief's finger had done some cutting.

Has Long Lived in This City. Mrs. Jenny Reilly, the widow of the late Thomas Devin Reilly, died at the cottage of Mr. Frank Schwarz, at Colonial Beach, Satur-Mr. Frank Schwarz, at Colonial Beach, Saturday morning. Although she had been in bad health for many months her death was hardly expected. Recently she was obliged to give up expected. Recently she was obliged to give up work at her desk at the Treasury Department, where she had been employed for many years, both in the secretary's office and in the bureau of engraving and printing. A week ago she left her home at the Congressional Hotel, on Capitol Dove. from Hill, for Colonial Beach, thinking that the change would be beneficial.

change would be beneficial.

Mrs. Reilly was a woman of great intelligence, unbounded generosity and marked refinement. She was widely known here and her death will be sincerely regretted. Her husband was Thomas Devin Reilly, the young Irish patriot and writer, who died in Washington March 5, 1854. Soon after his funeral a public memorial meeting was held in his honor in the rotunds of the Capitol, which was presided over by Mr. Dahas, then Vice President of the United States. Delegations from each house of Congress were present, as well as representatives from all the Irish societies of Washington and Baltimore. Many prominent speakers from other cities were present. It was then proposed to erect a monument over his grave, but it remained for the Clan-na-Gael Association of Washington, twenty-seven years after his death, to carry out the wishes expressed at that meeting. In 1881 his remains were removed from old St. Patrick's cemetery to Mount Olivet and a modest little cemetery to Mount Olivet and a modest little oross erected over his grave.

E. Boyle delivered an appropriate address at the dedication. Reilly was born in the town of Monaghan, Ireland, March 30, 1824. In 1843 he went to Dublin University and five years later he became one of the leading spirits of young Ireland during the troublons times of 1848.

He joined the party of O'Brien, Mitchel and Meagher and was associated with Mitchel in conducting the United Ireland newspaper. After the defeat of the revolution of '48 Reilly, in several disguises, eluded pursuit and escaped from the port of Newry in a bark bound for the United States, landing finally in New York. He soon entered upon the publication of a weekly journal called The People, afterward managing the Democratic Review. His last

They had seen the detective's attention called to them and they were evidently suspicious of him, and in turning corners they managed to get out of his sight.

When the officer reached 12th street he met Precinct Detective Weedon and to him he related the story of his shadowing the men. Thinking the men might return the officers stood on the corner a few minutes and presently they came along. Detective Mattingly grabbed his man, but the other man gave Officer Weedon a short chase. He was finally captured, however, and both men were taken to the station. Detective Mattingly's prisoner had the watch in his possession and he gave his name as W. M. Lewis, and that he was from New York. He told the officer that he had won the watch playing a the officer that he had won the watch playing a game of pool in a place on 4½ street. Preparing Jubilee Stamps,

Third Assistant Postmaster General Hazen is preparing the designs for a set of stamps to be preparing the designs for a set of stamps to be issued by the Post Office Department in honor of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus. He is getting together material that will suggest to him the most appropriate subjects to be illustrated on the stamps. One of the scenes to be illustrated undoubtedly is the landing of Columbus. The Convent of La Rabida, where Columbus was housed just before his departure from Spain on his voyage of discovery, will be the chief figure of another probably. The head of Columbus will decorate one of the stamps, probably the two-cent stamp. It is not the intention of the department to retire permantly the current issue of stamps, but it is likely that the issue will be suspended for a year, and that at the end of that time the dies and plates for the jubilec stamps will be destroyed and the old dies and plates will be brought out and delivered to the contractor again. The intention now is to have only one portrait on any of the stamps, that of Columbus. It will take some time to prepare the designs after the selection of the subjects, but Gen. Hazen expects to have them on male on January 1. The subjects are to be sent to the American Bank Note Company, which will prepare the designs and submit them for approval. sued by the Post Office Department in honor Saiisbury could say in the Queen's speech that having introduced measures for the local government of Ireland in the last parliament and finding them insufficient he was prepared to introduce a new measure of wider scope. If he did this and really promised home rule under another name, it is probable that Mr. Gladstone would accept it and in that way the present ministry might be retained.

The evictions and the attendant suffering due to the storm's work had a depressing effect upon the community. A number of the evicted men are lond in their denunciation of the firm. At the same time they allege that they were not given the assistance from the hundreds and which they say would have prevented much of the loss which resulted from damaged furniture.

An additional number of constables came to Homestead Saturday night in hopes that they could easily find many of the persons against whom they have warrants for riot and possibly murder. The locked-out men by some means learned which of them are sued, and warnings were given of the presence of the constables, so that the men kept out of the way. There seems a universal desire on the part of the men to avoid publicity, and, as a result, instead of hundreds of people wandering up and down the main streets of the borough it is almost deserted.
